Mission

ProTrials is dedicated to providing the clinical research industry worldwide with professional services that demonstrate the highest level of experience, quality, and integrity, while assuring career growth and job stability for its employees.

ProTrials Professionals

Unlike many contract research organizations (CROs), ProTrials does not hire inexperienced personnel. ProTrials' clinical professionals average ten years of clinical research experience, and its clients are welcome to view documentation of experience (CVs) of the ProTrials professionals before they start work on a project. ProTrials' business model is built on a hands-on, personalized approach to clinical projects. The management team works closely with its field staff and clients, ensuring compliance with internal quality assurance standards and practices. In a highly dynamic industry, ProTrials is known for its consistent employee retention rate of over 90%.

ProTrials' Competitors

Even though ProTrials is a small, privately-owned company, it competes with CROs of all sizes. The firm has clinical operations teams located across the country and around the world to meet client needs. Broad geographic reach and ProTrials' small size enable it to offer more cost-effective services than firms many times its size.

ProTrials Services

ProTrials focuses on clinical operations services including project management, quality assurance, Phase I-IV clinical monitoring, SOP development, and clinical staff training. More than 90% of the firm's business is repeat business, and clients engage 80% of the firm's team members for additional or extended projects.
